COMIX TRIVIA

- "Family Circus" seems to be a favorite target for satire. A small Washington State newsletter, "City Limits Gazette", has been running a Bil Keane Watch that sees deep meaning in the antics of Billy, Dolly and Jeffy. In it, readers debate why the telephone poles never have lines (crucifixion imagery) and why the characters have only one nostril (don't ask).
- "Peanuts" creator Charles Schulz as a high school student submitted his cartoons to the school yearbook, but they were rejected.
